Business Challenge

Businesses are continually being required to find ways to run leaner all the time. Service centers are no different. Organizations have purchased Knowledge Management software to deal with these resource constraints, maximize their investment, and streamline their processes. Many, despite being familiar with KCS (Knowledge-Centered Support) best practices for Knowledge Management, struggle to successfully implement this methodology and reap the collective resource and process streamlining benefits.

Through effective workshops, analyses, and coaching, Knowlysis can assist and train organizations to successfully implement Knowledge Management best practices and realize the benefits they seek.

Knowlysis Knowledge Management Services

KM Fundamentals Workshop

We have created a packaged KM Fundamentals Workshop – an on-site engagement that provides the Knowledge Management customer with:

- KCS Best Practices training
- Discussions and exercises designed to align current Knowledge Management processes with industry best practices
- Analysis of gaps between Knowledge Management best practices processes and the organization's current Knowledge Management tool

KM "State of the Service Desk" Analysis

To implement these best practices you must understand your organization's Knowledge Management maturity – this analysis provides that understanding and involves:

- Surveys and interviews for service desk management and analyst
- Live-action, on-site service desk observation
- Data analysis and a detailed report of Knowledge Management status

KM Best Practices Implementation Coaching

To bridge the daunting gap between understanding and implementing the KCS methodology, we provide a coaching engagement that includes:

- Regular analyses and reports to track progress
- On-site training and coaching of best practices implementation and management
- On-site "next steps" training and coaching of analysts
